BRIEF DESCRIPTION

Title: [Collection Ton Dietz: Pokot and related areas; research materials]

Dated (mostly): 1980s-2010s

Dimensions: 28 boxes

Languages (Mostly): English

Abstract: The collection is mainly comprised of material on the Pokot (Kenya) written or collected by Ton Dietz roughly between the 1980s and 2010s. Dietz studied how they survived in a marginal, semi-arid environment. In his dissertation, he reconstructs their livelihood strategies from around 1900 to 1986. Dietz was also involved in the ASAL programme in West Pokot. From 1982 onwards, the programme collected the existing knowledge on the West Pokot District, and brought all existing documentation together in the new District Information and Documentation Centre in Kapenguria. The research team also made 'locational development profiles', integrating all existing documentation about almost every location, and adding knowledge, based on questionnaire surveys and a lot of informal discussions with local inhabitants and civil servants (see: Dietz, 1987).

Biography or History: Ton Dietz studied human geography in Nijmegen (the Netherlands) and defended his PhD about Northwest Pokot at the University of Amsterdam in 1987. There he became professor in human geography in 1995, and later also the director of the national research school CERES, based in Utrecht (2002-2007). Between 2010 and 2017 he was the director of the African Studies Centre in Leiden, and professor in the study of African Development at Leiden University. He was also a member of the Board of AEGIS. After his retirement he became the co-chair of the Leiden African Studies Assembly, and the scientific coordinator of the conference Africa Knows!. (Source CV published in paper for the Africa Knows! Conference, panel 16: "Country/Region-specific Knowledge Development Histories in Africa", 20 January 2021)
